It took around five years to complete this thesis. During that time many people, both at home and abroad, helped me with various forms of support, which enabled me to finish this thesis. At this opportunity, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to them all.

Prof. Jan Breman, my supervisor. He provided me with the wonderful opportunity to study in the Netherlands. It was Pak Jan who first stimulated my interest to study informal sectors and rural industries. With his great experience, patience, and inspiring comments Pak Jan guided me safely through the long and winding road to finish this thesis. I am most grateful for his trust in me when I had to face personal difficulties; my mother passed away unexpectedly when my thesis was half-finished.

Prof. Ben White, also my supervisor. Pak Ben agreed to join Pak Jan as my supervisor when I had finished my first draft of the thesis. I am indebted to his critical comments on the drafts of my thesis. From Pak Ben, I learned about writing skills, particularly about contextualising research findings with broader issues, consistency in structuring arguments, and the use of detailed description with accurate data.

Dr. Irwan Abdullah was the first person who encouraged me to study in the Netherlands. He was very supportive not only when I applied for a scholarship to WOTRO as my sponsor, but also when I conducted my fieldwork in Kalitenga. His comments on my preliminary findings were very beneficial when I made the framework for this thesis.

Many people commented, criticised and provided suggestions on various drafts of the thesis. For their input, I would like to thank Prof. Otto van den Muijzenberg, Prof. Mario Rutten, Prof. Frans Hüsken, Dr. Ratna Saptari, Dr. Huub de Jonge, Dr. Pujo Semedi, Anna Marie Wattie, M.A., Dr. Hotze Lontz, Dr. Henry Sandee, the (ex) members of the “Asian Societies in Transition” promotion club: Ruly Marianti, Song Ping, Pepijn van der Port, Harald Bekker, Mariko Nakajima, Miranda Engelshoven, Marten Ndoen, and Farsijana Rissakota; and the members of the “coping with crisis discussion club”: Gerben Nooteboom, Agus Indyanto, Edwin de Jonge, PM Kutanegara, and Argo Tiwikromo.

For more than four years I had the privilege of enjoying the great academic atmosphere of the Amsterdam School for Social Science Research (ASSR) with financial support from the Netherlands Foundation for the Advancement of Tropical Research (WOTRO) and ASSR. I am grateful to Prof. Peter van der Veer, Prof. Marcel van der Linden, Prof. Nico Winterdink, Prof. Otto van den Muijzenberg, and Prof. Jan Breman for the education that they have provided to me. I would never have been able to finish this thesis without the seemingly endless support given by the secretariat of the Amsterdam School. For this, I would like to thank Dr. Hans Sonneveld, José Komen, Miriam May, Anneke Damers, Teun Bijvoet, Linda Atjak, Annelies Dijkstra, and Albertine van Peursen. A few colleagues and friends in the School also were very supportive of me, not only in discussion of academic affairs, but also in sharing the burdens of life as an academician. I would like to say thank you to Damian Raess, Irfan Ahmad, Ngiem Lin Huong, Kateryna Pishchikova, Eric Ansah, and Daniel Arhinful.

During my fieldwork, I received support from various institutes in my home university, Gadjah Mada: the Department of Public Administration of the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, Master of Public Administration Program (MPA), and the Centre for Population and Policy Studies (CPPS). I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Prof. Sofian Effendi (rector and director of MPA), Prof. Agus Dwiyanto (former director of CPPS), and Dr. Warsito Utomo (vice-director of MPA) for their support before and during my program. I would also like to thank Prof. Sunyoto Usman, the Dean of the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, who gave me permission to leave my teaching duties while I was conducting my study.

To the people in Kalitengah, especially Mbah Joyo, Mbak Kanthi, “Kelompok Ronda Malam Kamis” of Dalangan hamlet: Pak Juli, Pak Janto, Pak Buchori, Pak Joko, Ari, Cecep, Pak Lurah and his staff, Pak Haji Mariyono, Pak Tarmidi, Pak Sagi, Pak Min, Mas Gianto, Bu Bandi and family, “Kelompok Ronda Malam Rabu” of Trimasan hamlet: Pak Gito, Pak Tarno, Pak Prapto, Pak Bariyo, Pak Narto, and many others, whom I cannot mention by name here, I can only say: “Matur nuwun atas sedoyo banisannipun”. The thesis would never have been written without your kind support. I also wish to thank Elly Susanto, Muhammad Nuh, Subiyanto, Nining, July, Luki, Lucy, Hendro, Agus, Sri Mulyani, Kus, and Leli for their assistance during several rounds of household surveys carried out in Kalitengah. It was Elly Susanto who accompanied me during my fieldwork. Special thanks go to Drs. Sukamto, M.Si, who navigated the obstacles of bureaucratic procedures in Semarang to obtain the research permit for this research.

I wish to thank Ibu Rosemary Robson who made this thesis readable, NWO which provided the funding for the editing, Eddy Prasetyo who drew the maps used in this thesis, and Pak Arthur van Schaiik who translated the summary of this thesis into Dutch.

I also would like to thank Mas Pujo (my mentor), Mbak Juliette Koning, and Mbak Marie-Tries Meerbroer. They all took care of me when I came to Amsterdam for the first time in the winter of 1998. Many families and friends in the Netherlands comforted me when I was far away from home. Thanks to Pak Jan and Ibu Ilse, Pak Ben and Mbak Ratna, Pak Frans and Bu Cora, Mas Agrar and Mbak Atik, Hotze and Brigitte, Mbak Ruli and Pak Arthur, Ibu Tine and Pak Paul, Mas Made and Mbak Ninik, Damian and Natasha, Pakde and Bude Boss, Mbak Anna, Pak Kamdi, Mas Fatur, Mas Bando, Mbak Yuni, Tyas, Indy, Mas Argo, Mas Iqbal, Agung, Wibi, Inge, Agus W, Linda, Megy, Lianita, Anita, Nur, Deasy, Carlos, Astri, Januar, Berly, Irham, Wita, and Iman.

When I lost my mother in February 2002, I received love and encouragement from my extended family members, which strengthened me to continue my interrupted work. To Pakde and Bulik Son, Ninik, Dik Renno and Om Arieek, Dik Dani and Pak
