Proportionality in international humanitarian law

van den Boogaard, J.C.

Link to publication

Creative Commons License (see https://creativecommons.org/use-remix/cc-licenses):
Other

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: https://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
This study examines the principle of proportionality as it applies in international humanitarian law (IHL). The study first examines international law to determine the category of legal norms in which the IHL principle of proportionality must be placed. Subsequently, the notion of proportionality is analysed in a number of branches of international law. The interrelationship of these notions is clarified in light of the theory concerning principles of international law. The study then turns to an in-depth analysis of the IHL proportionality rule and how this rule must be applied in practice and on different levels of decision-making.

The final conclusion of this study is that in IHL, proportionality is understood both as a general principle permeating the interpretation and application of all IHL rules, as well as an important rule of IHL. In its practical application, the IHL proportionality rule is an inherently imprecise and flexible yardstick that nonetheless helps in protecting the civilian population. This study suggests that the balance of the proportionality assessment should in close cases tilt more towards protecting the civilian population than the wording of the rule may suggest.
Proportionality in International Humanitarian Law

Principle, Rule and Practice

Jeroen van den Boogaard
Proportionality in International Humanitarian Law

Principle, Rule and Practice
Promotiecommissie:

Promotor: prof. dr. T.D. Gill Universiteit van Amsterdam

Overige leden: prof. mr. P.A. Nollkaemper Universiteit van Amsterdam
prof. dr. P.A.L. Ducheine Universiteit van Amsterdam prof. mr. dr. H.G. van der Wilt Universiteit van Amsterdam prof. dr. E. Lijnzaad Universiteit Maastricht prof. dr. R. Geiss University of Glasgow

Faculteit der Rechtsgeleerdheid
Acknowledgements

This book is the result of approximately eleven years of work. I have often compared writing my doctoral thesis with climbing Alpe d’Huez on a child’s tricycle. It is possible; you are convinced that you will reach the summit. But you also know that it’s hard, and that it takes a long time and some suffering to get there. The work was interrupted often as a result of everyday life, teaching obligations, change of jobs, side-projects, many other distractions or, as Geert Tummers once put it: life’s rush-hour. I would first of all like to thank all my friends and colleagues who helped me and encouraged me on my journey. Sometimes, this help was in the form of merely asking when I would finish. Although that is the one question any PhD candidate hates, it is necessary and I have drawn renewed energy from all these conversations. Others have helped me by proof-reading draft-chapters. Thank you very much, Jelle, Mark, Barbara, Sigrid, Kinga and Rogier. I have also been very lucky to encounter superiors at the NLDA and JDV who enabled and even encouraged me to continue working on my dissertation. Thank you very much, Paul, Joop, Geert, Ben, Jeaco, Tjeerd, Ron, Michel, Sander and Mario. I also wish to thank the ACIL for hosting my PhD and more particularly for the generous mr. I. Henri Hijmans grant I had the privilege to receive. Furthermore, I am grateful to Niels van Tol and his colleagues at the Peace Palace Library for letting me work in peace and for providing access to simply anything I was looking for.

Of course, this book would never have been completed if it wasn’t for my supervisor professor Terry Douglas Gill, who knew exactly when it was time to encourage me and when to let me work in my own tempo, while always keeping up the faith that I would one day finish the dissertation. Thank you very much for your support, feedback, supervision and for believing in me. It has been a great privilege.

Last but not least, this book is as much mine as it is my family’s. Thank you, Wendy, for putting up with me all the times my mind was so occupied by my research that it forgot there were other things more important. Thank you Pa, Ma, Hanny and John, for supporting us and for taking turns in baby-sitting and picking up the children from day-care and school. For Fabio and Amber: the two of you remain my dearest and most impressive babies.

Delft, July 2019
Table of contents
4.2.2 Proportionality as a Means to Resolve Conflicts between Competing Interests... 80
4.3 Proportionality, Equity and Reasonableness ....................................................... 82
4.4 Conclusion ........................................................................................................... 84

Chapter 5: Proportionality and the Use of Force ......................................................... 89
5.1 Introduction ........................................................................................................... 89
5.2.1 Introduction ........................................................................................................ 90
5.2.2 From Morality to International Law ................................................................. 90
5.2.3. Proporionality in Just War Theory ............................................................... 92
5.2.3.1 The Ius ad Bellum Proportionality in Just War Theory ......................... 92
5.2.3.2 The Ius in Bello Proportionality in Just War Theory ............................. 93
5.2.4 Sub-Conclusion ............................................................................................... 95
5.3 The Concept of Proportionality in the Ius ad Bellum ........................................... 95
5.3.1 Introduction ...................................................................................................... 95
5.3.2 Proportionality in the Use of Force in Self-Defence ....................................... 97
5.3.2.1 Components of the Ius ad Bellum Proportionality ................................ 98
5.3.2.2 The Temporal Component ...................................................................... 100
5.3.2.3 Necessity and Proportionality in the Ius ad Bellum ............................... 101
5.3.3 Other Proportionality Equations in the Ius ad Bellum .................................... 102
5.3.4 Sub-Conclusion .............................................................................................. 104
5.4 The Concept of Proportionality in International Human Rights Law .................. 105
5.4.1 Introduction ..................................................................................................... 105
5.4.2 Applicability of International Human Rights Law during Armed Conflict ...... 107
5.4.3 Proportionality Restraining the Use of Force in International Human Rights Law ................................................................. 109
5.4.4 Sub-Conclusion .............................................................................................. 114
5.5 Conclusion ......................................................................................................... 115

Chapter 6: The Concept of Proportionality in International Humanitarian Law .... 117
6.1 Introduction ......................................................................................................... 117
6.2 Proportionality, Distinction and Precautions ..................................................... 118
6.3 The Development of International Humanitarian Law Proportionality .............. 120
6.3.1 The First Codifications of International Humanitarian Law ....................... 120
6.3.2 Legal Doctrine before World War II ............................................................... 123
6.3.3 After World War II: the Red Cross Draft Rules ......................................... 125
6.3.4 Additional Protocol I ..................................................................................... 126
6.3.4.1 Draft Article 46 (the present article 51 API) ............................................. 127
6.3.4.2 Draft Article 50 (the present article 57 API) ............................................. 129
6.3.5 The Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court ............................ 131
6.4 IHL Proportionality in International Customary Law ........................................ 132
6.4.1 Challenges in Establishing a Customary IHL Proportionality Rule ................... 133
6.4.2 The ICRC Customary Law Study ........................................................................ 136
6.4.3 Case Law on the IHL Rule on Proportionality .................................................... 137
   6.4.3.1 The Shimoda Case (1963) ................................................................................. 138
   6.4.3.2 The Nuclear Weapons Advisory Opinion (1996) ............................................. 139
   6.4.3.3 ICTY Case Law (1995-present) ........................................................................ 140
   6.4.3.4 The Eritrea-Ethiopian Claims Commission (2000 – 2005) ............................. 141
   6.4.3.5 The Supreme Court of Israel Sitting as the High Court of Justice (2005) ...... 143
   6.4.3.6 Sub-Conclusion on Case Law ......................................................................... 144
6.4.4 Other Indicators ................................................................................................ 144
6.4.5 Customary Law both in IAC and NIAC? ..............................................................147
6.4.6 Sub-Conclusion: the Customary Character of the IHL Rule on Proportionality .... 148
6.5 Conclusion ............................................................................................................. 149

Chapter 7: Other Standards of Moderation in International Humanitarian Law ...... 151
7.1 Introduction ............................................................................................................151
7.2 Combatants as Human Beings .............................................................................. 151
   7.2.1 Methods of Warfare .............................................................................................153
   7.2.2 Means of Warfare ...............................................................................................155
7.3 The Destruction of Enemy Property ......................................................................156
7.4 Blockades ................................................................................................................157
7.5 Belligerent Reprisals ...............................................................................................159
7.6 Security Measures during Occupation .................................................................. 161
7.7 Conclusion ...............................................................................................................162

Chapter 8: Interrelationship of Proportionality in Armed Conflict ......................... 165
8.1 Introduction ............................................................................................................165
8.2 Proportionality in IHL and the Ius ad Bellum ....................................................... 165
   8.2.1 The Strict Separation between IHL and the Ius ad Bellum ............................... 165
   8.2.2 Possible Relationships between the Ius ad Bellum and IHL Proportionality .... 169
   8.2.3 Proportionality in the Ius ad Bellum Influencing IHL Proportionality in Operations to Protect Civilians ................................................................. 171
   8.2.4 The IHL Proportionality Rule Influencing the Ius ad Bellum Proportionality in Terms of the Magnitude of the Permissive Collateral Damage ............. 173
   8.2.5 Sub-Conclusion .................................................................................................176
8.3 IHRL and IHL Proportionality ............................................................................. 176
   8.3.1 The General Relationship between IHL and IHRL ........................................... 177
   8.3.2 Lex Specialis and Complementarity ................................................................. 178
   8.3.3 Proportionality Relationship between IHL and IHRL ..................................... 181