Chinese family business networks in the making of a Malay state: Kedah and the region c. 1882-1941
Wu, XA

Citation for published version (APA):
Contents

Preface iii
Maps v

Introduction 1

1 Settings 19
The Chinese Community 19
Kedah And The Region 26
The Chinese In Kedah 36

2 Networking Regional Interactions 1882-1889 40
The Establishment of the British Consulate and Anglo-Siamese-Malay Power Politics 42
Incorporating the Kedah Opium Farm Into the Penang Networks 47
Family Business Networks: Approach From the Penang Lim Family 53
Family Business Networks: Approach From the Kedah Choong Family 60
The 1888 Kulim Disturbance 66

3 Family And State 1889-1895 79
Between Penang And Kedah: Family Business Networks And Power Relations 81
The Tender For The Kedah Opium Farm 1892-94 92
The 1893 Opium Crisis And Riots 98

4 Old Framework And New Development 1895-1905 112
British-Malay-Siamese Power Politics: The Resident British Consul 113
Chinese-Malay Legal Dispute: Tan Ah Yu’s Case 121
The Prominent Role Of The Kedah Choong Family 127
The Challenge by the Penang Lim Family and British-Malay Opium Conflict 140

5 Transition 1905-1909 148
The Role Of The British Consul 148
Family and Consul 152
The 1908 Kulim Riot 155

6 Confrontation And Accommodation 1909-1918 163
British-Malay Political and Legal Conflict 164
The Demise Of The Revenue Farms 180
The Rice Combine 1913-1918 187

7 Another Round of Adjustment 1918-1928 198
The British-Malay Legal Showdown 198
The Legal Dilemma of The Multi-Ethnic Encounter 203
The Rise And Decline Of the Chinese Business Elite 213
The Rice Milling Business 1919-1928 221

8 A New Profile Of Community And Business 1928-1941 228
The New Profile of Chinese Business Elite 228
The Changing Profile of the Rice Milling Business 235
The Pawnbroking Business Networks In the 1930s 240

Conclusion 253

Appendices 264
Abbreviations 272
Glossary 273
Bibliography 275
Samenvatting 290