Feeling & thinking in attitudes
van den Berg, H.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgements

By the time you think the work is done, you still have to write the most challenging two pages of the dissertation: The acknowledgements. This is not only the best-read part of the dissertation, but there are also many people you can thank, and in many ways. I was committed not to leave out the hard times I experienced. But the thing is, when you start writing, you look back, and looking back makes you sentimental. So let's get sentimental.

First, I want to thank my advisors. I enjoyed discussing meanings, ways to investigate, and interpretations of results. Joop van der Pligt, I want to thank you for the trust you had when I applied, while I left behind an unfinished dissertation. I also greatly admire your capacity to look at the big picture and to be able to go along with ideas even when they seem (at first) less in line with your own conceptions. Tony Manstead, I think that your contribution to this dissertation was of unestimatable value: I thank you for your insightful comments, especially on the logic in the theoretical line of reasoning. Daniel Wigboldus, it was great to have you join us. Your enthusiasm and expertise have been important in especially my experimental work.

I am grateful that I was able to be a part of the social cognition labgroup of Ap Dijksterhuis and Daniel Wigboldus. It was great fun and vital for doing research. We discussed everything from profound theoretical questions to the wording of a distractor task, and of course the weekly talk about sex. The bi-annual meetings of the KLI social cognition group were a perfect addition. I hope the new competetiveness between universities will not diminish this excellent opportunity to discuss findings in an open way.

I also want to thank the NWO and the EAESP for facilitating my stay abroad at the outstanding social psychology division of Ohio State University. Russ Fazio, I greatly enjoyed our collaboration and the insightful discussions we had about the role of affect and cognition in attitudes. How nice it was when the affect-cognition distinction turned out to be an old favorite! The RASCL-lab and its inhabitants have been the best colleagues abroad I could have hoped for. A big thank you to all the OSU PhD students for sharing good times. Suzanne Miller and Michael Olson, you are in my heart.

At the UvA, I am so grateful to have had such good colleagues, with whom I was able to share good and bad times. I thank the full PhD group for a great time with many discussions with many drinks. My special thanks to Yael de Liver, Catharine Evers and Kirsten Ruys, who have made my PhD time worthy by themselves. Also, I was really glad to have such good roommates as Ernestine, Boukje, Kirsten, Yael, Martijn, Karin and Daphne in particular.

There have been enough people who reminded me that there is a life outside being a PhD student. I want to mention a few especially. Vivianne, thank you for your capacity to remind me what really matters. Jaro, thank you for keeping my feet on (and sometimes off) the ground. Froukje thanks for your warmth, and Nynke thanks for your sharp insights - and mouth; thank you for being good and close friends. Jooske thank you for being a friend and coaching me through deliverance. My sweet sister Judith, thank you for being you and being so close to me. Mam, thank you for being the great person you are: I do not wish for any other mother! Jan, thank you for being such a good and broadminded stepfather. My brother Daniel, I want to thank you too for being there. Willem, Marianne, Els, Maaike en Willem: thank you for providing me with such a warm (in-law) nest. (Willem, Marianne, Els, Maaike en Willem: Bedankt voor het warme (schoonfamilie) nest).

I want to thank you Denny, for being the greatest love in my life, for being the best friend I could wish for, and for being my ‘rock in the shore’. We share our son Kick, who every morning makes us (more or less) forget our morning moodiness. Kick, your happy face, humor, and unrelenting trust in the world gives me great joy every day. But I want to dedicate this dissertation to my father, who would have been proud.

Amsterdam, November 2006
Helma van den Berg