Acknowledgments

It is a strange feeling to be at the end of a long road, where all that is left is to thank my friends. Without them, this road would not have ended, or would have been much longer and dustier.

The person I have the most to thank for – not only for the academic quality of my work, but also for my personal growth – is my advisor, Arnoud Boot. I cannot count all the ideas that we encountered together. Nor can I forget the countless lines of the text that were improved, or the long equations that were so elegantly simplified during our discussions. Even more vividly, I fondly remember the great times that we had with his family in Spain.

None of this could have been accomplished without my wife Tatjana and our love for each other. She has succeeded in enjoying life with a spouse writing a dissertation, which may be even harder than the challenge of writing one. I also thank my family, who have always backed my (sometimes eccentric) ideas.

The people that I met in the Netherlands made my stay there a wonderful experience. Thanks to Marco and Muriel, Giuseppe, Iwan, Irene, and Audrey. Back in Slovenia, Vasja and I fought side by side.

I would also like to thank Ivan Ribnikar for his ongoing support and my committee members for their suggestions on how to improve the text. I am indebted to Marko, Anjolein, Tanja, Liljana, Aleksandra, Boštjan, and Igor for their insightful discussions.
