Acknowledgments

I am grateful to many people who have generously offered me advice, support, and friendship during the graduate studies.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my advisor, Enrico Perotti. Enrico has carefully guided me through the PhD. He generously allowed much time and leeway in choosing the area of interest, and then offered continuous and unwavering support, encouragement, and stimulating pressure. Our conversations were always very illuminating, and I have learned a great deal from them. In the department and beyond, Enrico created a truly excellent research environment, which has steered and enabled me in many ways. I am extremely grateful to Enrico for the time and efforts he has put into me over the last six years.

I would also like to thank the members of the thesis committee, Viral Acharya, Arnoud Boot, and Elu von Thadden, who have offered very generous and important advice and help at different stages of writing this dissertation. I have also benefited significantly from conversations with Rafael Repullo and Javier Suarez.

Much inspiration for this work was provided by graduate internships at the Bank of England and the International Monetary Fund. I would like to thank the exceptional people who guided me through them: Erlend Nier, Tanju Yorulmazer, Adytia Narain, and David Marston.

In the penultimate year of the studies I was supported by the European Corporate Governance Training Network. I am very grateful to ECGTN for providing excellent research opportunities, in particular – enabling visits to University of Mannheim and CEMFI.

The Finance Group in Amsterdam is an exciting place with great people. I would like to thank all my Amsterdam friends, especially Razvan, Rocco, Joost, Ludo, Raj, and Zach. I am also very grateful to Jan Willem and Yolanda for their friendship and cheerful help.

I would like to dedicate this thesis to my parents and to my dear friend Marina, a source of my strength and inspiration.
