3 Person and object reference in language acquisition

3.1 Introduction

3.2 The acquisition of morphosyntactic forms for reference in Dutch, English and French

3.2.1 The acquisition of determiners

3.2.1.1 Dutch

3.2.1.2 English

3.2.1.3 French

3.2.1.4 Comparing determiner acquisition across the three languages

3.2.2 The acquisition of pronouns and proper names

3.2.2.1 Dutch

3.2.2.2 English

3.2.2.3 French

3.2.2.4 Comparing pronoun acquisition across the three languages

3.2.3 Section summary

3.3 The development of social-cognitive skills necessary for reference

3.4 Interaction between morphosyntax and pragmatics in the acquisition of reference

3.5 Research questions

4 Methodology

4.1 Introduction

4.2 Subjects

4.2.1 Dutch
4.2.2 English
4.2.3 French
4.3 Data selection
4.3.1 Non-analyzable utterances
4.3.2 Selection of analyzable references
4.4 Coding of morphosyntactic forms for reference
4.4.1 Determiners and nouns
4.4.2 Pronouns
4.4.3 Proper names
4.4.4 Morphosyntactic coding of left and right dislocations and cleft constructions
4.4.5 Overview of morphosyntactic coding categories
4.5 Coding of the pragmatics of reference
4.5.1 Pragmatic functions
4.5.2 Pragmatic coding of left and right dislocations
4.6 Reliability of coding
4.7 Statistical analysis
4.8 Outline of results chapters

5 The acquisition of morphosyntactic forms for person and object reference
5.1 Introduction
5.2 Criteria for acquisition
5.3 Acquisition of nouns and determiners for person and object reference
5.3.1 Frequency and productivity of nouns and determiners
5.3.1.1 Dutch
5.3.1.2 English
5.3.1.3 French
5.3.1.4 Cross-linguistic comparison
5.3.2 Frequency of use of determiners in obligatory morphosyntactic contexts
5.3.2.1 Dutch
5.3.2.2 English
5.3.2.3 French
5.3.2.4 Cross-linguistic comparison
5.4 Acquisition of pronouns and proper names for person and object reference
5.4.1 Frequency and productivity of pronouns and proper names in Dutch
5.4.2 Frequency and productivity of pronouns and proper names in English
5.4.3 Frequency and productivity of pronouns and proper names in French
5.4.4 Cross-linguistic comparison on productivity of proper names and pronouns

5.5 Conclusion

6 The frequency of the pragmatic functions of reference

6.1 Introduction

6.2 Frequency of pragmatic functions in Dutch
   6.2.1 Section summary

6.3 Frequency of pragmatic functions in English
   6.3.1 Section summary

6.4 Frequency of pragmatic functions in French
   6.4.1 Section summary

6.5 Conclusion

7 The acquisition of reference with nouns and determiners

7.1 Introduction

7.2 Methodological considerations

7.3 Input
   7.3.1 Background analyses on the use of nouns and determiners in the input
   7.3.2 Nouns and determiners for reference in the input
   7.3.3 Section summary

7.4 Child language
   7.4.1 Ungrammatical bare nouns for reference in child language
   7.4.2 Nouns and determiners for reference in child language
   7.4.2.1 Child Dutch: form-function associations of nouns and determiners
   7.4.2.2 Child English: form-function associations of nouns and determiners
   7.4.2.3 Child French: form-function associations of nouns and determiners
   7.4.2.4 Section summary

7.5 Influence of speed of determiner acquisition on the acquisition of reference with nouns and determiners
   7.5.1 Influence of speed of determiner acquisition: cross-linguistic comparisons
   7.5.1.1 Comparison Dutch-French
   7.5.1.2 Comparison English-French
   7.5.1.3 Comparison Dutch-English
   7.5.2 Influence of speed of determiner development: within-language comparisons
   7.5.3 Section summary
7.6 Influence of the input on the acquisition of reference with nouns and determiners

7.6.1 Language-specific patterns of determiner use in reference

7.6.2 Influence of cue frequency and cue consistency on the acquisition of appropriate determiner use in reference

7.6.3 Section Summary

7.7 Conclusion

8 The acquisition of reference with pronouns

8.1 Introduction

8.2 Methodological considerations

8.3 Input

8.3.1 Background analyses of pronoun use in the input

8.3.2 Pronouns for reference in the input

8.3.2.1 Form-function associations of pronouns as opposed to nouns and proper names

8.3.2.2 Form-function associations of different types of pronouns

8.3.2.3 Section summary

8.4 Child language

8.4.1 Child Dutch: pronouns for reference

8.4.1.1 Form-function associations of pronouns as opposed to nouns and proper names

8.4.1.2 Form-function associations of different types of pronouns

8.4.1.3 Section summary

8.4.2 Child English: pronouns for reference

8.4.2.1 Form-function associations of pronouns as opposed to nouns and proper names

8.4.2.2 Form-function associations of different types of pronouns

8.4.2.3 Section summary

8.4.3 Child French: pronouns for reference

8.4.3.1 Form-function associations of pronouns as opposed to nouns and proper names

8.4.3.2 Form-function associations of different types of pronouns

8.4.3.3 Section summary

8.5 Influence of the input on the acquisition of reference with pronouns

8.5.1 Language-specific patterns of pronoun use in reference

8.5.2 Influence of cue frequency and cue consistency on the acquisition of appropriate pronoun use in reference

8.5.3 Section summary

8.6 Conclusion
9 Discussion and conclusion

9.1 Introduction

9.2 Background on the acquisition of forms and functions
  9.2.1 Acquisition of determiners and pronouns
  9.2.2 Frequency of pragmatic functions of reference

9.3 The interaction of morphosyntax and pragmatics in the acquisition of reference
  9.3.1 Associating determiners and pragmatics
  9.3.2 Associating pronouns and pragmatics

9.4 Influence of the input in the acquisition of reference
  9.4.1 Influence of language-specific patterns
  9.4.2 Influence of cue frequency and cue consistency

9.5 Parallel sensitivity to pragmatic factors in determiner and pronoun use for reference

9.6 Implications: the modularity debate and further research
