The journey which has led to this dissertation began in Spain, during the research for my master's thesis. During the research I walked with a group of pilgrims on their way to Santiago de Compostela. Despite the hardship of the blisters, it was during that pilgrimage that I learned that I wanted to continue doing social science research. It was also during that walk that I realized most clearly that it was my parents, Henk and Ineke, who had made it possible for me to pursue my interests in Anthropology. The memory of an intense feeling of gratitude still mingles with my memories of the Spanish landscape. It was also during that hike that I first got to know several people from Brazil. The beautiful experiences I shared with Walder and Celso and the friendship with Zelinda led me to decide to do research in Brazil when I was accepted at the ASSR.

From there on I started a different journey and there are several important people I want to address. I want to thank Zelinda for kindly inviting me to stay at her place and helping me find my way in Rio de Janeiro initially and Leo for his friendship and enthusiasm, which have helped me through the first months. Without the help of Marcus Cardoso, the start of the research in Cantagalo would have been much more difficult. Lindalva I would like to thank for inviting me to stay at her house in the periphery of Rio and showing me a little of the trails of those who came to the city from the Northeast. Climbing the morro in those days would have been nearly impossible without the help of Ismael, who introduced me to the community. Of all those who have helped me during my stay in the morro, I would like to mention specifically: Paulo and Fatima, Josué, Deize, Josemar and Ciberman. Several people in the morro will always remain immensely dear to me. Claudio and Elisete, you made the difference. Didi, you welcomed me in your family and I truly felt home. Demilson and Branco keep on drumming. Denilda, Yara and Poty, thank you for your company. Orlando and Yara, my neighbors and friends, I will always admire your creativity.

Besides those who helped me and became friends during my physical journeys, the last ten years have also been an intellectual journey that started with my initial contact with the people of the research group of Religion and Society at the UvA. Peter van der Veer, Peter Pels, Patricia Spyer, Peter van Rooden and specifically Gerd Baumann have given me the inspiration to pursue this path. My friends from the faculty: Koen Alefs, Rae Eikelboom, Bregje Swart, Niels Rigter, Titus Dürst, Remco Buisman, Sanderien Verstappen and Hanne Reus: our discussions breathed life into the matter. At the ASSR
I found several like-minded friends from whom I have also learned a lot. Of the 'Anthropology Club', I want to mention particularly: Rachel Spronk, Eileen Moyer, Anouk de Koning, Yatun Sastramidjaja, Joost Beuving, Shifra Kisch, Irfan Ahmad, Barak Kalir, Basile Ndjio, Esther Peperkamp, Miryam Aouragh, 'Giulietta' and Nienke Muurling. I also wish to thank the B2-floor 'community', especially Christian Broër, who has made the writing period fun. Of the ASSR staff, Peter Geschiere has always been a great inspiration to me. I do not know many who show such loyalty to their students combined with such expertise. I also want to thank Miriam, Anneke, Teun, José and Hans for their dedication. In Rio de Janeiro, Clara Mafra directed me towards the right fieldwork site and Patricia Birman generously aided me practically and intellectually and introduced me to many of her inspiring colleagues. Her home felt like a refuge and I have benefited greatly from her knowledge of Brazilian Anthropology. Rosemary Robson I would like to thank for her fast corrections and her kindness.

This dissertation is undoubtedly the result of the years of cooperation with what I like to call: 'the extended Pionier family': Mattij van de Port, Rafael Sánchez, Stephen Hughes, Charles Hirschkind, Brian Larkin, Meg McLagan, Jeremy Stolow, Vincent de Rooij, Marleen de Witte, Francio Guadeloupe, Lotte Hoek, Zé d'Abreu and Carly Machado. I learned so much from all of you. During all the dissertation years, Michiel Baud has been a steady and stable factor who has helped me to think of Brazil in a wider Latin American perspective and has always encouraged me enormously. Lastly I would like to express my gratitude to the director of the Pionier project and my supervisor: Birgit Meyer. She has been one of the driving forces of the research and I learned more from her than anyone can imagine or sum up here. Thank you Birgit!

There are many of my friends who have supported me through the years and I cannot mention all of them unfortunately. Special thanks go to Paul, a friend for life, 'the boys' of Rap-9 and those of 'the filmclub'. While I was told that the writing of a dissertation could be an emotional period, much has happened which has made it difficult to stay focused on academic matters. In the course of the preliminary fieldwork, my father, Henk Oosterbaan, was diagnosed with cancer. Though he was undergoing intense treatment, he insisted that I should go to do fieldwork. While he and his wife, Immy, could still visit me in Brazil, my father passed away not long after my return to Amsterdam. Here I wish thank my family: Ineke, Koen, Immy, Olfertjan, Inge, Anne and Bram for their enormous support and love. Life and death lie close to one another as they say. Six and a half months after my father died, my daughter, Isis, was born in good health. Her smile makes every writer’s block seem futile. Without my mother and mother-in-law, Mieneke, as well as Marie-José and Guurtje, it would have been nearly impossible to finish this dissertation. Their care of Isis is extraordinary. That brings me to Daphne, the mother of Isis, the person who has accompanied me through everything. Your love, patience and trust make me who I am and where I am.
