The global competition for talent: Life science and biotech careers, international mobility, and competitiveness

Kuvik, A.N.

Publication date
2015

Document Version
Final published version

Citation for published version (APA):

Committee on Prospering in the Global Economy of the 21st Century: An Agenda for American Science and Technology, National Academy of Sciences, National Ernst & Young, & EuropaBio. (2012). What Europe has to offer biotechnology companies: Unraveling the tax, financial and regulatory framework: EYGM Limited.

EUROFOUND. (2006). Long-distance mobility in Europe: Getting the balance right Retrieved 4 March, 2015 from Foundation.
no.7: Biotechnology innovation scoreboard. Brussels: European Commission Enterprise Directorate-General.
Group on Increasing Human Resources for Science and Technology in Europe.
Brussels: European Commission, Directorate General for Research Brussels: European Commission, Retrieved 4 March 2015 from http://ec.europa.eu/enterprise/sectors/biotechnology/files/docs/biotech_analysis_c ompititiveness_en.pdf
European Commission.
R&D Investment Scoreboard. Luxembourg: European Communities.
European Communities.
Seville, Spain: European Commission Joint Research Centre.
Statistics and Indicators. Brussels: European Commission.
mobility of researchers. Seville: IPTS.
European Migration Network. (2007). Conditions of Entry and Residence of Third Country Highly-Skilled Workers in the EU. Synthesis Report.
Migration Network and European Commission.
Madrid: European Migration Network and European Commission.
European Migration Network. (2013). Attracting Highly Qualified and Qualified Third-European Science Foundation. (2009). Research Careers in Europe – Landscape and Horizons. Strasbourg: European Science Foundation. professionals in Western Europe. Working Paper 71, The Center for Comparative Immigration Studies (CCIS), University of California, San Diego.

Garvalov, B. K. (2007). Mobility is not the only way forward. European Molecular Biology Organizations’ (EMBO) Reports, 8(5), 422. doi: doi:10.1038/sj.embor.7400969

Gordon, R. J. (2004). Why was Europe left at the station when America's productivity train departed? : Northwestern University and CEPR.

Klee, H. (2001). Industry or Academia. This Is the Question! Plant Physiology, 126(3), 924-925

