UvA-DARE (Digital Academic Repository)

Scandinavism

Overlapping and competing identities in the Nordic world: 1770 - 1919

van Gerven, T.W.J.

Publication date

2020

Document Version

Other version

License

Other

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

van Gerven, T. W. J. (2020). Scandinavism: Overlapping and competing identities in the Nordic world: 1770 - 1919. [Thesis, fully internal, Universiteit van Amsterdam].

General rights

It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations

If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: <https://uba.uva.nl/en/contact>, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.

SCANDINAVISM

OVERLAPPING AND COMPETING IDENTITIES
IN THE NORDIC WORLD
1770 – 1919

SCANDINAVISM
OVERLAPPING AND COMPETING IDENTITIES
IN THE NORDIC WORLD
1770 – 1919

Tim van Gerven

Tim van Gerven

SCANDINAVISM
OVERLAPPING AND COMPETING
IDENTITIES
IN THE NORDIC WORLD
1770 – 1919

Tim van Gerven

Cover design and layout

Damon Chan

Printed and bound

Ridderprint BV, Alblasserdam

ISBN: 978-94-6375-863-5

SCANDINAVISM
OVERLAPPING AND COMPETING IDENTITIES
IN THE NORDIC WORLD

1770 – 1919

ACADEMISCH PROEFSCHRIFT

ter verkrijging van de graad van doctor

aan de Universiteit van Amsterdam op gezag van de Rector Magnificus

prof. dr. ir. K.I.J. Maex

ten overstaan van een door het College voor Promoties ingestelde commissie, in het openbaar te verdedigen

op woensdag 1 juli 2020, te 11:00 uur

door

Timotheus Wouter Jan van Gerven

geboren te Amsterdam

PROMOTIECOMMISSIE

Promotores:	Prof. dr. J.Th. Leerssen	Universiteit van Amsterdam
	Prof. dr. H.A. van der Liet	Universiteit van Amsterdam
Copromotor:	Dr. S. van der Poll	Universiteit van Amsterdam
Overige leden:	Prof. dr. R.A.M. Aerts	Universiteit van Amsterdam
	Prof. dr. M.J. Wintle	Universiteit van Amsterdam
	Prof. dr. J. Wadum	Universiteit van Amsterdam
	Prof. dr. D. Thorkildsen	Universiteit van Oslo
	Dr. R.S. Hemstad	Universiteit van Oslo

Faculteit der Geesteswetenschappen

This work has been financed by the Dutch Research Council (NWO) as part of the research programme on Interlocking Nationalisms funded by the Spinoza Premie 2008, project number SPI 30-672.

Part of a research stay in Oslo was financed through a Mobility Grant from the Norwegian Agency for International Cooperation and Quality Enhancement in Higher Education (Direktoratet for internasjonalisering og kvalitetsutvikling i høgare utdanning, DIKU).

|| You know, if you've a friend that you trust well,
and from him want nothing but good:
share thoughts with him, and keep trading gifts,
go and visit often.

– Hávamál

(trans. Andy Orchard)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	11
Part I – Imagining Scandinavia	39
Introduction	41
1. The Mythology Feuds I. The Copenhagen Question of 1800	43
2. The Mythology Feuds II. Discord at the Geatish Society	64
3. The Mythology Feuds III. Finnur Magnússon vs The Baden Brothers	78
Part II – Cultivating Scandinavia	87
Introduction	89
4. Sociability: Creating a Scandinavian Public Sphere	93
5. Language: (No) Translations, Spelling Reform, and Education	108
6. Textual Culture: Creating a Collective Historical Identity for Scandinavia	117
7. Visual Culture: Perennial Brotherhood and Visual Silences	149
8. Performative Culture and Commemorations: Scandinavia Embodied?	185
9. Conclusion: Scandinavia as a Cultural Sphere	195

Part III – Challenging Scandinavia	201
Introduction	203
10. Articulating Norwegian Identity With and Against Scandinavia	206
11. Norwegian History for the Norwegians!	226
Reclaiming Norse Antiquity and the 400-Years' Night
12. Appropriating Tordenskjold. On the Flexibility of Memory Sites	240
Part IV – Ambient Scandinavia	261
Introduction	263
13. Still Latent? Scandinavian History in Literature High and Low	266
14. History in the Streets. Scandinavia on the Street Level?	288
15. A Valkyrie in the Park.	300
City Planning, Tourism Marketing, and Old-Norse Sculpture
By Way of Conclusion	317
Notes	328
References	406
List of Illustrations, Figures, and Tables	436
Summary	439
Samenvatting	445

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The last four years I spent most of my days in the presence of dead Scandinavians. A significant chunk of the remainder of my time I had to dedicate to explaining people why in the world I would do such a thing. Why would studying the Scandinavian past be relevant for us here in the Netherlands now? And why would someone voluntarily occupy themselves with reading old and dusty books and basically write a very long MA thesis about it?

Well, here it goes. Two things. Firstly, I really enjoyed working on this thesis. I grew to love my dead Scandinavians and I consider myself privileged to have been able to earn my wages while doing something I really loved doing.

Secondly, and arguably way more importantly, the humanities are relevant, cultural history is relevant. Certainly in this day and age during which nationalism is on the rise again everywhere, playing into the hands of xenophobic demagogues and right-wing firebrands with questionable agendas, not in the least in the Netherlands, it is crucial to remind ourselves of a number of home-truths: that national identity is not genetic, not a fact of nature, that for the individual, their national identity is just one identity among many, many others, that national identity should never serve as a mechanism of exclusion, that homogeneous, monocultural nation-states have never existed and will never exist. The study of Scandinavism teaches us all this, and more. And this is why a study such as this one is, in fact, necessary: it provides today's heated debates on national identity with a dearly-needed historical context, which will hopefully contribute to stopping nationalist rhetoric from spinning out of control.

So, with all that off my chest, it is time to thank some people. A lot of people, in fact. Although writing a PhD thesis is largely a lonely affair, I am thankful that I could rely on the support and friendship of so many.

First of all, I would like to extend my gratitude to my supervisors, Joep Leerssen, Henk van der Liet and Suze van der Poll, for their feedback, encouragement, and inspiration. As each of you has their own speciality and points of focus three supervisors never felt like a crowd and I think that our unique dynamism made this dissertation into what it is. I am grateful for having been part of the ERNiE-project as well as for the opportunities I was given to share my knowledge on Scandinavism and Romanticism in several guest lectures within the Scandinavian Studies programme.

I owe a special thank you to Kim Simonsen, my guide into Scandinavian academia and – and this is of vital importance – the world of craft beer and Nordic seafood. Kim, you always kept me sharp on theory and methodology, and I fear that I must have driven you to the point of despair by postponing that part of my dissertation for quite some time. Thank you for your great involvement in my project and for being the little methodology devil on my shoulder.

Ruth Hemstad also deserves special mention. Ruth, thank you for the many inspiring discussions we had on, well, of course, Scandinavism, for the many reading tips and shared papers, for your visits to Amsterdam, and for hosting me during my research stay in Oslo.

To study Scandinavism is to become a Scandinavian. I will always remember the wonderful conferences at Schæffergården and Lysebu where I got to meet so many great Scandinavian scholars. The reports of the Scandinavian student meetings would always sentimentally describe the reporter's joy of hearing all three Scandinavian languages spoken simultaneously. I was overcome by the same sentiment at these occasions, a historical sensation, almost, in Huizinga's sense of the word. With the risk of forgetting someone, I want to especially thank Kari Haarder Ekman, Rasmus Glenthøj, Morten Nordhagen Ottosen, Dag Thorkildsen, Magdalena Hillström, Jes Fabricius Møller, Karina Lykke Grand, Lone Kølle Martinsen, Roald Berg, Lis Møller, Thor Mednick, Berit Kjærulff, Lea Grosen Jørgensen, Sally Schlosser Schmidt, Kristian Nymark, and Niri Ragnvald Johnsen. A special shout-out goes to my 'Icelandic connection' Simon Halink and to my roommates in Oslo, Susann Holmberg and Henrik Mathiesen.

Talking about roommates: they do not come much better than at the 'PhD Attic' of the Bushuis. Rena, Sabine, Josip, Milou, Ayse, Tymen, Enno, Marija and the many, many guests that visited us over the years... you are absolute legends! Thank you for making our always-too-warm-or-always-too-cold-broken-window-that-is-still-not-fixed attic into a place where serious-faced methodological deliberations and psychological consultations could be unproblematically interlaced with badminton sessions and communal singing of the many great chansons from Def Rhymz's indispensable songbook.

My friends, at last! Sjoerd, Jizzo – thank you for being such excellent paranimfs! Damon – I owe you one for the wonderful design of this thesis! Dimitri, Marelle, Wouter, Nóra, Tim, Hanneke, Rosa, Walter, Martijn, Karel, Quinten, Aleks, Jelle, Joost, Eirik, Seidi, Anders, and, of course, Franzi – thank you for keeping up with a silly sod like me!

My family! Pap, Mam, Emma, Joep, Inga, Oscar – thank you for being there, always.