Affective identities: Denaturalization and the politics of nationality in France
Beauchamps, M.L.

Citation for published version (APA):
Acknowledgments
Acknowledgments

Although I take full responsibility for the content of this dissertation, I would like to stress my gratitude to all who made it a collaborative project:

Mireille Rosello, for your enthusiastic support all along the way, as well as for your sharp and particularly insightful feedback. It has become so familiar working with you after all these years that it is hard to imagine it coming to an end. I wish that our paths keep crossing.

~

The ASCA community, for making me feel at home. Special thanks to ASCA’s managing director Eloë Kingma and to Jantine van Gogh for their administrative support and organizational assistance. Much appreciation also goes to ASCA directors Christoph Lindner, Esther Peeren, and Patricia Pisters.

Tim Yaczo and Miriam Meissner, for the pleasures associated with co-organizing the 2013 international ASCA workshop Dislocating Agency, Moving Objects.

Hanneke Stuit, Noa Roei, Sruti Bala, for the enjoyment of conducting a research group together.

My officemates and colleagues, who accompanied my weekly rhythm: Tim Yaczo, Mikki Stelder, Hanneke Stuit, Niall Martin, Thijs van den Berg and Rob Allen.

~

While ASCA felt like home, my work has immensely benefited from numerous encounters across disciplines and universities:

I’m grateful to Marieke de Goede who welcomed me into the European Security Culture project reading group. Thanks to Marijn Hoijtink, Gavin Sullivan and Stephanie Simon for your stimulating engagement.

The Literature and Law reading group at Leiden University. Special thanks to Frans-Willem Korsten, Yasco Horsman and Tessa de Zeeuw.
Acknowledgments

My discovery of the Oecumene Project at the Open University at the beginning of my research project was a decisive moment. Special thanks to Engin Isin and Deena Dajani.

The University of London Institute in Paris, for hosting my first stay in Paris while I discovered the world of archives.

Teresa Pullano, for making it possible to join you in Brussels for a semester, providing us with the space to collaborate. Thanks to the Center for Political Theory at the Université Libre de Bruxelles for its generosity and interest in my work.

Sandra Mantu, for sharing your insights on the deprivation of citizenship in Europe.

Rarely did I enjoy a summer school as much as during the 2013 European International Relations Summer School Security, Borders and Mobility, organized by the University of Kent, King’s College London and SciencesPo. Special thanks to Tugba Basaran and Didier Bigo; to Emmanuel-Pierre Guittet and Philippe Bonditti for your workshop on genealogy and archеology, and for letting us brainstorm about further collective actions; to Marijn Hoijtink, Matthias Leese, Bruno Magalhães, Sharon Weinblum, and Stef Wittendorp: I believe that our 2014 workshop Mobility/Security: Between Authority and Imagination was but the beginning of our further collaboration; I look forward to the publication of our edited volume and to known and unknown future projects; to Sarah Perret for your enthusiasm of writing and presenting together.

Although I cannot possibly name you all, many thanks goes to all of you who made conferences and summer schools such inspiring and invigorating moments.

~

My sincere thanks to Michael Katzberg whose sharp editing skills were very much appreciated.

~

Last but not least, I want to thank all those whose love, friendship, warmth and support has accompanied me along the journey.