An eloquent enigma: the dramas of Jacobus Cornelius Lumenaeus à Marca (c. 1580 - c. 1628) and their contexts
Gruijters, R.J.

Citation for published version (APA):
Gruijters, R. J. (2010). An eloquent enigma: the dramas of Jacobus Cornelius Lumenaeus à Marca (c. 1580 - c. 1628) and their contexts Eigen Beheer

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgments

The research for this PhD thesis has been conducted as part of the project ‘Latin and Vernacular Cultures, Theatre and Public Opinion in The Netherlands, ca. 1510-1625’, supported by a Vidi-grant of The Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) and hosted by the Huygens Institute (The Hague) of the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the University of Amsterdam. I would like to thank these three institutions, as well as the Institute of Culture and History of the University of Amsterdam for providing the support and infrastructure necessary for keeping up a steady work pace.

During the three years that I have worked on Jacobus Cornelius Lumenæus à Marca and his Latin tragedies, I have become indebted to many people who, in one way or another, have contributed to this thesis. Some have provided useful suggestions by means of stimulating debate or have generously shared texts and resources which would otherwise have been difficult to procure. Others have contributed immensely by just being there. Their support is beyond words.

First and foremost my sincere thanks are due to Prof. Jan Bloemendal, the initiator of the project and supervisor of this thesis. Together with Juliette Groenland and Verena Demoed, we have spent many pleasant hours discussing the enigmatic world of neo-Latin drama. I would also like to thank Michiel Verweij of the Royal Library of Belgium in Brussels, who provided me with invaluable advice and assistance, not only while I was conducting research at the manuscript department, but also afterwards. I am grateful to Heidrun Führer of Lund University, whose enthusiasm and expertise I greatly appreciate. A particular word of thanks goes to both Lia van Gemert of the University of Amsterdam and Hubert Meeus of the University of Antwerp for sharing their extensive collections of texts.

Most of all, however, I am indebted to Frans Steyaert, who, as a PhD candidate of the University of Louvain in the 1970s, had built up an extensive archive related to Lumenæus à Marca. I have profited in particular from his numerous copies of manuscripts from the Vatican Libraries, which were closed during the period of my research. If it were not for Frans’ magnanimity in unselfishly providing me with his archive, it would have been impossible to gain access to crucial information in many of these documents.
During the past few years, I have had the pleasure to meet many young researchers. This was made possible first and foremost by the Huizinga Institute, the Research Institute and Graduate School of Cultural History. I cherish the friendships with some of the most intelligent and friendliest people I have ever met, most notably the Amici Gandavenses: Arjen, Lieke, Matthijs, Nina, and Tim. Similarly, the leesclub – tirelessly headed by Katell Lavéant and Arjan van Dixhoorn – made for many pleasant discussions and good ideas. My co-inhabitants – Arabists, Grecians, and what not – of room 3.37 of the PC Hooft building in Amsterdam were always there to supply good company, and coffee.

A final word of thanks goes to my family, especially my parents, who have always supported me during my studies. Geria, I have always tried to leave Lumenaeus at the office – but he came home with me more than once. Thank you for being so patient.

To my grandfather, who taught me my first Latin, I dedicate this work in grateful and loving memory. Non scholae sed vitae.