Academic language in early childhood interactions: a longitudinal study of 3- to 6-year-old Dutch monolingual children

Henrichs, L.F.

Citation for published version (APA):
List of Figures

1 Introduction
Figure 1.1: The academic language continuum 1
Figure 1.2: Bidirectional relationships between context, register and language choices 2
Figure 1.3: The elements that constitute context and register 13
Figure 1.4: The elements that constitute context, register and language choices 15
Figure 1.5: Graphic representation of relationships between theoretical and linguistic variables 17

3 The lexical level of academic language
Figure 3.1: Lexical density parents over time 45
Figure 3.2: Lexical density children over time 51
Figure 3.3: Lexical diversity parents over time 52
Figure 3.4: Lexical diversity children over time 60
Figure 3.5: Children’s vocabulary scores at the four measurement times 60
Figure 3.6: Mean MLR scores for parents during the interaction tasks 64

4 The syntactic level of academic language
Figure 4.1: Parents’ proportions of multi-clause utterances over time 89
Figure 4.2: Parents’ proportions of complex multi-clause utterances over time 98
Figure 4.3: Children’s proportions of multi-clause utterances over time 99
Figure 4.4: Children’s proportions of complex multi-clause utterances over time 100
Figure 4.5: Parents’ proportions of lexical clause subjects over time 100
Figure 4.6: Children’s proportions of lexical clause subjects over time 115
Figure 4.7: Parents’ proportions of lexical clause objects over time 115
Figure 4.8: Children’s proportions of lexical clause objects over time 116

5 The textual level of academic language
Figure 5.1: Teachers’ and parents’ distribution of abstraction levels at T3 (4;2) 125
Figure 5.2: Teachers’ and parents’ distribution of abstraction levels at T4 (5;10) 133
Figure 5.3: Parents’ and children’s proportions nonpresent talk during the picture task 134
Figure 5.4: Parents’ and children’s proportions nonpresent talk during book reading 137

6 The sociopragmatic level of academic language
Figure 6.1: Overview of speech acts coded for in the current study 143
Figure 6.2: Parents’ mean proportions of various speech act categories during the marble slide task 147
Figure 6.3: Parents’ mean proportions of various speech act categories during the mealtime conversation 156