My last four years in the Netherlands has been a time of personal and professional growth, and I am so grateful toward those who have walked with me on this journey. To begin, I am fortunate to have had two excellent promoters. Agneta and Gerben, thanks so much for this fantastic opportunity. You have both contributed to my development as a scientist in innumerable ways, but I am perhaps most grateful for the confidence you have had in me. As an advisory team, you managed to artfully balance an insistence on high standards with kindness and support, and have motivated me to strive for excellence in my work. I will always appreciate your guidance and friendship.

I am similarly indebted to my colleagues from the Social Psychology Department at the University of Amsterdam. What a brilliant and gezellig group you are! You have been essential to my ability to build a life and career in a new country, and my memories of our time together will be a source of warm feelings for many years to come. Job, traveling around the world with you has been an immense pleasure, and our collaborations have taught me to appreciate the power of teamwork more than ever before. Suzanne, your enthusiasm for both science and the world around you are a source of inspiration to me. Thanks so much for your warmth, camaraderie, and generosity. The two of you are the best "siblings" I could have hoped for, and I wish you all the best as you begin new and exciting chapters in your lives.

I have also been blessed with excellent officemates. Perhaps more than anyone else, the four of you shaped my day-to-day life at the UvA and made it a pleasure to come to work every morning. Thanks Sjoerd, for your infectiously upbeat attitude, and also for providing me with a soundtrack to accompany my work. Clemens, without you I don’t know how long it would have taken to overcome my nasty case of Authorware phobia. Janina, you taught me a thing or two about peace and tranquility (even if it didn’t always show). Bastiaan, you’ve been a fantastic role model for learning how to commute successfully. Thanks also for making sure I never had to take home any leftover brownies! And of course, thanks to all of four of you for tolerating my corny jokes and foul language.

I must also thank Karin Couvret, Ho Jung Mulder, Nico Notebaart, and René van de Belt for their excellent assistance. The four of you are invaluable assets to the UvA, and academic life would surely grind to a halt if you weren’t there to keep the gears turning smoothly. I would also like to acknowledge the board, staff, and members of the Kurt Lewin Institute for providing a first-rate venue through which to expand my knowledge of cutting-edge research in social psychology. The opportunities to network with my peers, meet internationally recognized experts, and be inspired by the research of both new and experienced scientists have been truly invaluable.

Finally, I thank my family for their unwavering encouragement. Mom, Dad, and Cameron, I know my move to the other side of the world hasn’t always made things easy, but you have always nevertheless supported my goals without question or hesitation. You have always been there for me, despite our geographical distance, and you are never far from my thoughts or my heart. Ian, I could never have done this without you. You have taught me what it truly means to share another person’s emotions, and with every day we spend together I become more thankful for your love and companionship.
