Small steps in dynamics of information

Velazquez Quesada, F.R.

Citation for published version (APA):
Bibliography

C. Dégremond and N. Gierasimczuk. Can doxastic agents learn? on the temporal structure of learning. In He et al. (2009), pages 90–104. ISBN 978-3-642-

E. Dekel, B. Lipman, and A. Rustichini. Standard state-space models preclude

H. van Ditmarsch. Prolegomena to dynamic logic for belief revision. Synthese, on pages 125 and 131.

Intelligence and Intelligent Agent Technologies (WI-IAT 2009), Milan, 2009. Cited on pages 60, 77, 85, 90, 99, 100, 101, and 119.

and 40.

Synthese (Knowledge, Rationality and Action), 169(2):405–423, July 2009. ISSN

J. J. Drapkin and D. Perlis. Step-logics: An alternative approach to limited reasoning. In Proceedings of the European Conf. on Artificial Intelligence, pages

H. N. Duc. Logical omniscience vs. logical ignorance. on a dilemma of epistemic

H. N. Duc. Reasoning about rational, but not logically omniscient, agents.

D. Grossi. A note on brute vs. institutional facts: Modal logic of equivalence up to a signature. In G. Boella, P. Noriega, G. Pigozzi, and H. Verhagen, editors,

Y. Hamami. The interrogative model of inquiry meets dynamic epistemic logics. Master’s thesis, Institute for Logic, Language and Computation (ILLC), Universiteit van Amsterdam (UvA), Amsterdam, The Netherlands,

